

Hi everyone,

It seems once again we are looking at more positive news for Manitoba. Come tomorrow, the provincial government will be loosening even more restrictions increasing indoor and outdoor gathering sizes, and allowing non-essential businesses to operate with reduced regulations. This change comes ahead of schedule and is in large part due to most of our willingness to vaccinate as soon as possible. For everyone who has vaccinated (which I know is most of you) I'd like to once again thank you for doing your part. We've all earned this, and hopefully, we can still salvage most of our summer traditions!

For those who haven't vaccinated, a word of caution. There is talk on both a Federal, Provincial, and individual business owner levels to limit and even possibly restrict certain non-essential services to those who refuse to vaccinate. This decision seems to be the only logical conclusion to come to as those who refuse to vaccinate only slow down the re-opening phase for everyone. While you may have the right to refuse to vaccinate, it's important to remember that self-less acts will come with consequences. All the more reason to book your vaccinations as soon as possible, the process is quick and painless.

I'm really optimistic that this truly will be the end of the tunnel, and while there never again will be a normal like we know before, I know in the long run the changes that will come of this will be for the betterment of all our public health and safety.

Enjoy your weekend!

Mayor Cal Huntly.
